

BIO: Stephen Henwood CBE

Stephen Henwood CBE is Chair of the Aerospace Technology Institute with responsibility for working with industry and government to develop civil aerospace technology for the benefit of the UK economy. Originally intended to operate until 2020, the life of the ATI was subsequently extended to 2026. He has undertaken a number of senior financial and general management roles for Tate & Lyle and BAE Systems. His appointments at BAE Systems included Group Financial Controller and Group Managing Director, International Partnerships. In 2008 he was appointed Chair of the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority and served two additional terms before standing down in 2017.