

Dominic Maxwell – Associate Partner McKinsey & Company

Dominic Maxwell is an Associate Partner who specialises in aerospace and aviation, and has served three aerospace manufacturers and two air forces, as well as eight airlines and six airports, in 20 countries.

He has published widely on aviation topics, including “How to transform your airline”, “Winter is Coming: the future of European aviation (and how to survive it)”, and “Gridlock on the Ground: What Happens When Airports Become Constrained”.

Dominic was a speechwriter and political adviser for the UK Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change, and Research Fellow at the UK’s Institute for Public Policy Research

Dominic holds a Masters in Public Policy from the University of Harvard, focusing on transport and infrastructure economics, and a BA in Philosophy, Politics and Economics from the University of Oxford.